The Council of New Jersey Grantmaker's Spring Conference for the Social Sector will bring together seasoned leaders and cutting-edge innovators to explore New Jersey's rapidly evolving landscape and the complex implications for the funding community and its grantee partners.

Designed specifically for New Jersey's grantmaker and nonprofit communities, the event will provide attendees with an overview of our state's current landscape - demographics, socioeconomic, education, environment, business, technology, workforce, government, infrastructure, healthcare, and more - and present a range of informed views and potential scenarios about what grantmakers and nonprofits can expect over the next few years.

To fully explore and unpack these complex issues, this gathering will completely break the mold on conference design with a highly innovative structure intended to drive bold ideas, explore experienced perspectives, and engage everyone in creative problem solving.

This gathering will offer a full audience shared learning experience with participants coming together to collectively consider and discuss what it really means for the issues that our sector cares deeply about. For the social sector to be effective and prepared, a united, collaborative community is essential. Funders and nonprofits need a robust understanding of what is on the horizon.

We hope the 2017 Conference for the Social Sector will generate greater collaborative thinking that can lead to collective action. To support the highly attended spring event, we invite you to support us by becoming our Champion, Collaborator, Connector or Colleague Sponsor!
